

Mission accomplished for A.C. Arts Commission, students

Atlantic City Beach Patrol montage by Amanda McCabe, 14.

Atlantic City High School photo

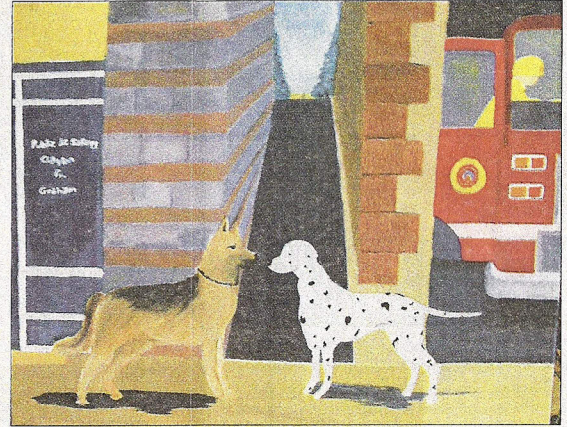

The mission was to design and produce an original painting incorporating an Atlantic City public safety emergency vehicle or person. Two Atlantic City High School students under the tutelage of art teacher Jennifer Pullman accepted the challenge.

Amanda McCabe, 14, painted a beach patrol montage. Annlee Hoang, 16, painted police and fire dogs facing off in front of a city fire station.

The paintings, which will hang at Atlantic Cape Community College's Charles D. Worthington Atlantic City Campus, were presented to the school by the Atlantic City Arts Commission at a recent ceremony.

The paintings will be on permanent display in the second-floor lounge.

Lyn Soper

Police/fire dogs by Annlee Hoang, 16, of Atlantic City High School.

Atlantic City High School photo

Staff photo by Sean M. Fitzgerald

Atlantic City High School art teacher Jennifer Pullman, left, talks with her students Amanda McCabe, 14, of Margate, center, and Annlee Hoang, 16, of Atlantic City, right, as McCabe's mother Laura, looks on.

Staff photo by Sean M. Fitzgerald

Atlantic City Arts Commission member Jackie Mancuso, front left, and commission vice-chairperson Joanna LaSane, left, discuss the paintings with the students.

Staff photo by Sean M. Fitzgerald

Lennox Warner, chairman of the Atlantic City Arts Commission, compliments the paintings and the artists at the ceremony at Atlantic Cape Community College's Charles D. Worthington Atlantic City Campus.